Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133).
- Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

Status

- 1) ☒ Responsive to communication(s) filed on 30 September 2002.
- 2a) ☐ This action is FINAL. 2b) ☒ This action is non-final.
- 3) ☐ Since this application is in condition for allowance except for formal matters, prosecution as to the merits is closed in accordance with the practice under Ex parte Quayle, 1935 C.D. 11, 453 O.G. 213.

Disposition of Claims

- 4) ☒ Claim(s) 1-27 is/are pending in the application.

DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1, 2, and 8-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

The basis of this rejection is set forth in a two-prong test of:

- (1) whether the invention is within the technological arts; and
- (2) whether the invention produces a useful, concrete, and tangible result.

For a claimed invention to be statutory, the claimed invention must be within the technological arts. Mere ideas in the abstract (i.e., abstract idea, law of nature, natural phenomena) that do not apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts fail to promote the "progress of science and the useful arts" (i.e., the physical sciences as opposed to social sciences, for example) and therefore are found to be non-statutory subject matter. For a process, the recited process must somehow apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts.

In the present case, claims 1, 2, and 8-10 fail to apply, involve, use, or advance the technological arts. The steps of extracting data from a database, developing information, and applying a tax knowledge base could all be performed by hand. Examiner suggests amending claim 1 to reflect that the database is a "computer database".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Westerlage et al. Westerlage et al disclose a system and method comprising the steps of extracting asset data from an asset management database, wherein the asset data relates to the ongoing location of the asset (see col. 13, lines 53-67); developing information about the location of a plurality of assets (see col. 13, lines 53-67); determining how much time an asset spent in a given tax jurisdiction (see Figures 2 and 6); and applying a tax knowledge base to each asset based on the location of each asset (see col. 10, lines 21-36). Because Westerlage retrieves ongoing location data, it is inherent that information is obtained that is useful in determining whether the assets have been idled and determining property tax exemptions.

Westerlage et al do not disclose the step of developing information about the value of a plurality of assets. However, it is common in the art to use the value of an asset to determine tax information. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ the step of developing information about the value of a plurality of assets to determine tax information.

Westerlage et al do not disclose the use of an enterprise resource planning package, a supply chain management software package, or a specialized asset management software package. However, such packages are common in the art and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ the step of extracting asset data from an enterprise resource planning package, a supply chain management software package, or a specialized asset management software package because such information could be used to determine tax information.

Westerlage et al do not disclose the step of using the Internet. However, the Internet is old and well known in the art. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ the Internet to access the tax knowledge base or the asset management database because the Internet is a convenient means for transmitting information.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Vanderpool et al disclose a system for retrieving property location data from a database. Golden et al and Meder disclose a system for assessing taxes. Hough discloses a system for valuating property based on property taxes. Sklarz et al, Florance et al, and Robbins disclose tax databases.
